DID YOU KNOW STAT FACTS

- West's win at Woodville was their first at that ground since 2003.
- 16 of Norwood's 21 players registered a score in their match against Glenelg.
- North have now won their last 3 encounters against the Bulldogs all away from Prospect (2 @ Elizabeth, 1 @ AAMI)
- In their first two games Sturt have outscored opponents 21 goals to 8 in the first half and then been outscored 26 goals to 12 in the second.

JOHN NANKIVELL'S PREVIEW

This contest promises to be a highly entertaining one. West are in strong form with two wins from their first two starts. While the Panthers are coming off the bye and looking to atone for their first round home loss to the Tigers.

The Panthers promise so much this season, but their Round One effort showed that they are still more than a little shaky in defence. West Adelaide has some very strong goal kicking forwards, and have shown that they are more than capable of kicking big scores in their first two encounters. It becomes imperative then, that the Panther's defence is on their game on Friday night.

The midfield battle is an interesting one, with Westie's strong consistent ball winners like James Ezard, Ben Macreadie and the red hot Chris Schmidt taking on the Panther's flashy and slightly pacier on ball brigade of Nick Liddle, Toby Stribling and Joel Cross. This will be the pivotal battle of the night and a highlight of the contest.

Up forward the Panthers appear sound, with the likes of Michael Wundke and Peter Rolfe both capable of kicking big bags of goals. However, they will certainly have their work cut out for them against a West defence led by Ryan Ferguson and Joel Tippett. The match up on Rolfe will be a critical one for the Bloods, with Daniel Caire or Scott Bricknell appearing likely candidates.

While I feel South are going to be a strong team this season it really is very hard to tip against the Bloods, who are looking so very good at the moment. The Panthers still have some on field issues to work through.

I think that this week West will be too good.

PANEL PREDICTIONS

Peter Argent

Playing at home against West, South must win this contest at Noarlunga.

Two losses from two home games is totally unacceptable for Ronnie Fuller's side but on current form there seems little chance that the Panthers will get over the line if their opponent's form continues.

There were a number of options through the middle of the ground for West Adelaide, and the early season form of Chris Schmidt is nothing short of sensational.

Ryan Ferguson marshalls a strong defence and Tyson Slattery is starting to develop in attack.

South must generate plenty of the ball from the midfield and Michael Wundke needs to snaffle a bag.

On early season form you can't back against the Bloods

West by 15 points

Don Cooper

Friday night football at Hickinbotham Oval kick starts Round 3, and what a belter of a match to get proceedings underway!

Given the perfect conditions leading into the match, there should be a huge crowd on hand to witness these two sides battle it out on the vast expanses of "Arctic Park".

The Bloods were vicious against the Eagles last week. If they bring that same endeavour and level of execution to Noarlunga, then the locals could be in for a hard night. However, after witnessing the Panther's training session last Friday night, they are prepared to take the physical contest right up to the 2012 Grand Finalist.

Football is a funny game as we know, and strange things can happen to sides in scintillating form. The test for Andy Collins may well just be in maintaining his side's confidence and cohesion without getting too carried away.

Strong through the mid-field and in attack, but suspect in defence, Ron Fuller's men may well show fight for the first 40 minutes of match time, but seem to raise their own question marks at the major break.

While I would not be surprised by an upset, it's the overall strength and form shown to date which makes it just too hard to go past the Bloods – this time!

West by 23 points

Phil Herden

South have had two weeks to think over what went wrong on Good Friday, working out how Glenelg were able to have a scoring shot 61% of the time they entered inside 50, would be a good start.

Meanwhile the Bloods are suddenly the toast of the town after their TV demolition of the Eagles last week "cracking the ton" two weeks in a row.

Amazingly West have won the last nine of their encounters including the last four at Noarlunga. All signs point West.

West by 21 points

Phil Aspinall

The Panthers have had a week to stew over their disappointing Round 1 performance and get the chance, after the bye last week, to redeem themselves again on home soil tomorrow night.

But the Bloods are playing some very attractive, attacking football and will go into this clash full of confidence after their big away win against the Eagles last week.

This should be an intriguing clash that will have some tantalising match ups all over the ground.

West's current form and home ground issues for South have me picking the Bloods in this one.

PETER ARGENT'S PREVIEW

Again this is a case of both teams coming into this clash with a victory in the previous round.

On Friday night Sturt should have won by more than its final six point margin against Port Adelaide.

In his third game, 22 year old Ziggy Vitkunas kicked five goals, while the AFL listed Tim McIntyre finished with four. Suggesting there are enough avenues to goal for the Double Blues, especially when you have marking targets like Michael Coad and Matthew Duldig up forward.

Sam Kerridge, former Glenelg dual best and fairest Ben Kane and another Bay's discard, Luke Panozzo, are winning plenty of the ball. While Richard Tambling and Brodie Martin give Sturt plenty of run out of defence.

Winning at Elizabeth is a perfect way to start the season for the Roosters, as their year started in Round Two.

Among the North Adelaide senior squad are new faces in Nathan Gordon, Joe Anderson, Tom Langford and Chad O'Sullivan.

While the goals were shared between AFL listed big man Daniel Stewart and Port Pirie lad Lewis Johnston, along with Leigh Ryswyk, who all kicked four goals.

The Thring brothers, Max and older sibling George collected 59 touches between them, while the evergreen Luke Ivens gave plenty of run with a 30 possession performance.

Even with all of their AFL listed players, the Double Blues will need to perform at their absolute best to stretch their hosts at Prospect Oval.

While North may be stretched in ruck, they have the personnel over the rest of the ground to ensure a second win from two starts

PANEL PREDICTIONS

Don Cooper

With the Roosters cock-a-hoop following the perfect start to season 2013, they step right into a danger zone on Saturday afternoon, when 2012 nemesis Sturt pay them a visit at Prospect Oval. The Blues did their best to throw away the match against the Magpies after successfully doing just that in Round One against the Eagles, but they have shown signs of improvement at each outing and pose a real threat here.

Both sides have demonstrated the ability to cover heavy losses from their respective playing lists, and the new look outfits look super impressive. Nathan Gordon didn't let his admirers down in his first outing in red and white colours, while team mates Max Thring and Leigh Ryswyk showed all their class in ripping apart the Bulldogs. But perhaps it was more so their efficiency as opposed to overall dominance which earned the win at the Ponderosa, giving the Double Blues an opening to drive a wedge through their run.

Sturt's mid-field will need to exploit the Roosters around the stoppages, and will look to the continued form of Sam Kerridge and Tim McIntyre and co. to start the forward forays. Once inside 50, the Double Blues have a rising star in Ziggy Vitkunas to hone in on, and the match up on him will be a telling factor for the Roosters. Gordon will be a key playmaker on his form shown throughout the trials and in his debut SANFL match, and is sure to have a shadow following him all day – regardless of the amount of sunshine!

Both sides have solid structures but I feel Sturt can spoil the party for the Roosters and maintain their place in the five – for now!

Sturt by 19 points

Phil Herden

A real Jeckyll & Hyde game looms at Prospect. In recent years North cause upsets then struggle with being favourites, whilst Sturt go from riches to rags all in the space of a four quarter contest.

However I can't fault the Roosters so far in 2013, as they backed up an unbeaten (2-0) trial game form with a win at Elizabeth to start their home & away season.

Meanwhile, Sturt have outscored their opponents 21 goals to 8 in the first half this season before being outscored 26 goals to 12 in the second.

Sturt have proven to be the fly in the Rooster ointment over the last two seasons, winning five of last six played and even three of the last four at Prospect. I think though North are starting to find some long lost consistency

North by 22 points

Phil Apsinall

The Roosters kicked off their 2013 campaign with an impressive win last week against the 'Dogs, while the Double Blues just held on for a tight victory against the fast finishing Magpies.

Playing four quarters will be the key for Sturt's chances in this one. While they have a pretty exciting forward line, North have a solid back half, who were in great touch last week. Having seen both sides in action last weekend, I feel the home side are playing the better footy at the moment.

The Roosters have lost four of their last five clashes against Sturt, but will be too strong on Saturday.

North by 38 points

John Nankivell

On paper North look to be the better team, but the Double Blues have a very good recent record against North including a strong win the last time the two sides met at Prospect, midway through last season.

However history counts for nought on Saturday, and on early form the Roosters are looking impressive. Sturt may have beaten the Magpies last week, but their second half fade out (two in two weeks) was very worrying and must not happen this week against the Roosters.

DON COOPER'S PREVIEW

The rivalry and resentment between the Port Adelaide Magpies and Glenelg goes back to some epic clashes during the eighties – and for those who witnessed this era, memories of those times has assured the continuance of tribal tension which still exists today. And while a new generation of players will take the field at Alberton Oval Saturday afternoon - albeit without the flowing mullets and thigh gripping shorts of that dreadful decade of fashion - you can bet each is aware of the fables handed down through football folklore of those spiteful battles and be prepared to add another chapter to the saga.

Ken McGregor has had an inauspicious start to his senior SANFL coaching career down at the Port, but the signs were there last week of a side which is starting to find some character and is not far off breaking the ice in season 2013. However, the concern with that side is around the fact that twelve of its sixteen goals came from two players who have now put themselves in a position for a Showdown recall.

With seven goals – and nearly winning the match against Sturt off his own boot - Graham Johncock (Adelaide) has certainly pleaded his case with Crow's coach Brenton Sanderson for a call up, while John Butcher (Port Adelaide Power) did nothing to hide his aspirations of Showdown selection with a lazy five. Team mates one week, bitter rivals the next?? But that could be a telling factor going into this match.

The Tigers could also be in danger of losing Jarryd Lyons to the, "Team for All South Australians," after returns of 27 and 28 disposals in the first two rounds against South Adelaide and Norwood respectively. So with the selection table being so critical, it will be a case of who balances their side the most and takes to the park with the most vigour that will take the vital two points.

The Magpies were smashed in contested marks last week and will also need to be less wasteful when they have possession of the ball. The Tigers on the other hand, looked a sharp outfit for the first five quarters of the season, but were over run by a class outfit last Saturday evening – and the longer the match went, the worse they looked. Kris Massie attempted to keep pace with the competition leaders, but even with 120 rotations off the bench, his side could not sustain the run required to compete at the level set by the Redlegs.

Tigers' skipper, Ty Allen, was held to just 1 kick and 3 hand-passes against the 'Legs and will be ready to explode against the old foe. While fans will be hoping Ruory Kirkby will be back in the mix to provide a key target up forward. But while those two players will certainly need to take a leading role in Glenelg's performance, Lewis Hender looms as the x-factor in the contest. He's developed into an explosive player this season and possesses the ferocity to tear the opposition apart.

The scales could certainly tip in either sides favour though - and there is plenty riding on the outcome of this match. On one side, the Magpies could start to get back in the fold with a win, but defeat spells a 0-3 start and a long, long road ahead. On the opposite side, the Tigers could reset the ledger in their favour with an away win here. Given the manner in which they played the first quarter against Norwood, I am tipping they can take the two points against - with all due respect - a lesser rival.

PANEL PREDICTIONS

Peter Argent

If the first two weeks are any indication, it is going to be a long winter for Ken McGregor and his Magpies.

Glenelg weren't able to handle the might of the Redlegs last Saturday evening, but on Good Friday showed plenty of vigour and desire.

Jarryd Lyons was again the stand out for the Bays, but a lack of serious targets in attack were evident.

The return of Ruory Kirby is a big acquisition. Lachie Button will return after his suspension, which will help the Glenelg ruck division.

Steve Summerton and Sam Gray had big possession games against Sturt, while Graham Johncock was a great small target in attack. It will be interesting to see if he is in a black and white jumper for this game.

The Magpies will need a big effort to be competitive.

Glenelg by 26 points.

Phil Herden

First game at Alberton for the Black and White and already the season feels like it is on the line.

Hopefully the Maggies can take something out of their comeback against Sturt and start much stronger than their first two games.

Fast starts are not the issue for Glenelg, who may have claimed a rare scalp in winning a quarter against the Redlegs. However, their fade out post quarter time would have been a major concern for all at the Bay.

Head to Head they have split their last six games with three wins each and last four at Alberton with two wins each.

Glenelg by 19 points

Phil Aspinall

The Magpies will be desperate to put their opening two games behind them and get that first win on the board. While the Tigers were competitive in the opening half against Norwood but were defeated comprehensively in the end.

Both sides could only put together one good half last week, so on that basis the one that plays as close to four quarters as possible should take the two points home. This should be an entertaining and close encounter down at Alberton.

The Bays are playing slightly better football than Port at present, so I'll stick with them, just.

Glenelg by 9 points

John Nankivell

The Magpies almost pinched a win last week against Sturt, while the Tigers were good early against Norwood, but were inevitably blown away.

This promises to be a very even contest, and you get the feeling the two clubs respective AFL players will have a big say on proceedings.

Port desperately need a win and will go close, but I think the Bays might just be a little too strong.

PHIL ASPINALL'S PREVIEW

Central have not lost the opening two clashes of a new season since 1990 and, with a young and inexperienced side, now face the risk of dropping their first three games.

Tomorrow night they host an in-form Redlegs outfit that looks primed to defend their title, and who have comfortably accounted for both opponents in the first two outings of the new year.

After a poor finish to the season last year and a slow start in 2013, the 'Dogs last tasted victory back on the 25th of August 2012.

The 'Legs have taken all before them, and are looking ominous again this season with their great start to the year. With good form at Elizabeth of late, as well as winning their Round 2 clash out at the Ponderosa last season and the trial game played earlier in the year, Nathan Bassett's well oiled machine will clearly start as favourites.

With a midfield boasting the likes of Brett Zorzi, Mitch Grigg, Matt Thomas and Matt Suckling the visitors should gain the upper hand in the middle, while Central will want to capitalise more on the tap work of Seb Guilhaus. On ballers, James Boyd, Paul Thomas and Jarrod Schiller will need a lift, especially with the absence of Co-Captain Brad Symes, while young Brock Castree is showing real promise and will need another strong clearance game for the 'Dogs.

Receiving quality supply from their in-form midfield, the Norwood forward line of Matt Panos, Ben Warren, Mark Evans and Peter Persinos looks much stronger on paper than the Doggies defence, currently missing veteran Yves Si-benaler.

The likes of Corey Reichert will need to play at his best, while Roy Laird may need to shift Tom Collier back into defence from a wing.

David Haydon should get the match up on the dangerous and in form Peter Persinos.

The home side will be keen to atone for their slow start to the year, and may be bolstered by the return of running half back and AFL listed Sam Colquhoun.

But Norwood could welcome back even more class to their line up, with clearance king Tim Webber and hard-at-it wingman Matt Fuller, both possibilities of returning from injury. Skipper Kieran McGuinness has slotted straight back into the side, and picked up where he left off prior to his knee reconstruction.

Based on current form and respective strengths of both sides, the 'Legs should win comfortably.

Make no mistake – those out Elizabeth way are nothing less than filthy at the start to season 2013! Two losses from two outings is far from acceptable for Roy Laird and everyone else connected with the club – a club which has prided itself on success and intimidating all comers with the very appearance of their name as the opposition. But it hasn't taken long for those days to be a distant memory it seems, and the once dynamic Doggies - while obviously still respected for their courage and culture - are now perceived in a far less fearful light. How quickly the tide can turn!

But the reality is nothing lasts forever – and they are about to take on the club which has wrestled the status of supremacy away from them. The Norwood Football Club has strategically plotted the downfall of each and every adversary with frightening precision and has simply picked up – if not increased – their dominant form of 2012. With an average winning margin of 78.5 points in the opening two rounds of 2013 the 'Legs have not just beaten their opponents into submission, but clinically annihilated them, breaking their hearts and minds.

And Central District is next on the hit list! There will be no taking the foot off the gas from this group, with Nathan Bassett commanding the intensity and attention to detail which makes his structures and strategy so successful. The 'Dogs are a developing group, but that development is not happening at anywhere near the rate Roy Laird would hope for and it will be a case of minimising the losses for mine.

Given the Redleg's outs could comprise a formidable side of their own it's their depth which maintains the pressure - whereas the Dog's depth is being stretched to breaking point.

On a positive note for Central fans though, Ryan Williams now has that first match under his belt and will be primed to take on as many opponents as possible in his usual manner, but it's where his support will come from which is the big question. Brock Castree has quickly found his feet at League level, but he is just one of many players still building experience at the highest level.

With just three players with 100 plus games under their belt, the 'Dogs could be in for a painful Saturday afternoon – and a long year to boot. They will come back.....just not this week!

A couple of years ago this was the most daunting trip in SANFL football.

In the current climate and with the rebuilding of the young Bulldog's squad, it will be important for the hosts to be competitive against the competition yardstick and reigning premiers.

The depth of the Redlegs suggested the side has many options, especially with Kieran McGuinness returning and young Mitch Grigg winning his share of the ball through the middle. It also looks like veteran Ben Warren and the returning Matthew Panos are working well in attack for Norwood.

Central District will go into this second home game as definite underdogs. Brayden O'Hara, rookie Brock Castree, Trent Goodrem and Ryan Williams won their share of the ball last week, but the Bulldogs need more from leaders Paul Thomas and Brad Symes.

It will be a shock if Norwood lose.

Phil Herden

I've had a long standing tipping rule never to back against the 'Dogs at Elizabeth, however an exception needs to be made here.

It looks like a tough opening for Central who play last year's top three teams first up, before getting a chance to better settle their developing line up. A 0-3 start would be a worry, but the schedule does get easier from here.

As for the Redlegs, yes they were challenged early last week but they certainly rose to the occasion outscoring Glenelg, scoring 19 goals to 5 after the first quarter enroute to an emphatic 84 point win, the largest of the season so far.

Norwood won at the Ponderosa in Round 2 last year, breaking a 10 game losing streak at the ground, and they will continue that trend on Saturday.

Last year this contest would have been a hands down winner for match of the round. These days however things are a little different.

Norwood are in awesome form while the Dogs are rebuilding. Central are by no means easybeats and will give a good account of themselves, but right now it is hard to see anyone in the competition (except maybe West) getting close to the reigning premiers.

UNBELIEVABLE POINT

North forward Lewis Johnston contributed strongly last Saturday night, playing his part in the Rooster's solid away win against Central District. Playing in attack, the Adelaide listed player finished the night with 11 disposals, 6 marks and 8 shots on goal. His return of 3.4 was a solid performance, but the most impressive effort from the Port Pirie junior was his shot on goal that resulted in an 'out of bounds on the full'. The burley actually lobbed flush on the very top of the point post. Something the fans who noticed it at the time had probably not seen before.

MAN OF HONOUR

Many may have been surprised to hear that Glenelg forward, Ruory Kirkby, missed the Tiger's big loss against Norwood last weekend to be Best Man at his friend's wedding. Quick to question the timing and commitment from Kirkby, it was later revealed that the original plans had the nuptials taking place post football season, in October. Due to a serious family illness on the side of the Bride's family, the wedding was brought forward and, with the full blessing of the Glenelg Football Club, Roury honoured his duties. Just shows that there is more to life than just football.

LIGHTING BLUES #1

The Sturt Football Club may have got the win in their unique home clash last Friday night at Coopers Stadium, but the night wasn't without its glitches. With the main game about to kick off and both sides in their final warm ups on ground, it was realised that the lights had yet to be switched on. Brightening up enough to allow the contest to start on time, it was then a blown light tower in the north-western pocket during the quarter time break, that saw an almost half time like delay at the first change. All was fixed in the end and the game resumed within 20 minutes.

LIGHTING BLUES #2

Having been left in the dark to wind up the broadcast down at Gliderol Stadium last Saturday night, who was the innovative special comments person wielding his mobile phone like a light sabre over the Budget and stats sheet to deliver his closing thoughts on the evening's proceedings? (Well, he had gone to the dark side after all). And who was the other commentator who had a very dim view of the whole situation indeed? Matters were unfortunately a lot more serious for a visiting patron who took a nasty tumble down the darkened grandstand stairs – thankfully not suffering any major injuries. With more night games scheduled at the ground in upcoming weeks this needs to be improved.

COTTON GONE

The Norwood Football Club announced earlier in the week, that due to an increase in his work demands current Reserve's coach, Jarrod Cotton, has stepped down from the role. A popular personality down at Coopers Stadium, the former Central, Norwood and Port Power player actually served as League interim coach a few seasons ago, and more recently took the Redleg's seconds through to a Grand Final appearance. His position is yet to be filled, but the 'Legs will announce more in relation to the coaching position later in the week.

POM POM UPDATE #2

As a follow up to last week's query, don't spend too much time looking out for the "Sophisticats" down at Hickinbotham Oval on Friday night. Chances are getting to the point where the Panther's League side will continue to enter Hickinbotham Oval for home matches without any razzle dazzle from the girls at all this season. Has this part of the SANFL literally gone south down at Noarlunga?
